The senator showed the shallowness and hollowness of the claim that the present adminis-tration is friendly to the old soldier, and Mr. Burrows made one of his finest addresses, devoting his attention exclusively to the tariff question.

The afternoon parade was hardly worthy of being dignified by that name, considering that it took place in a city of the size of Kalamazoo. The only feature of the procession furnished by the city was a band, with the single exception of a company of old soldiers who had associated themselves together for the purpose of marching in the column each of them wearing an appro-priate badge. Had it not been for the delegation from Paw Paw, which consisted of the flambeau and young ladies republican clubs, the members of which were continually applauded as they marched along the streets, and for other delegations from surrounding towns the parade would have been a fizzle. As it was, the procession was not more than a quarter as large as the one in this town on Wednesday last. A city like Kalamazoo ought to be ashamed of its lack of enterprise on any such public occasion.
